She is best known for her appearance in the first Winter Olympic Games women's bobsleigh. Smith was born in Bromsgrove, Worcestershire, and is a graduate of the University of St Andrews. At the Olympics in 1998, she became the first British woman to qualify for the Winter Olympics, and ended up taking part in four Olympic games, all in bobsleigh (1998, 2002, 2006, 2010) and one in the women's skeleton (2014). She also competed at the World Championships in 2002 in addition to appearing at the 1994, 1998 and 2002 Winter Olympics, earning medals at all three. At the 2010 Winter Olympics, she had been chosen to carry the Olympic flag at the closing ceremony. Smith was also a gold medal-winning member of the Great Britain bobsleigh team at the 1994 Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, and bobsledder Betty Heynen was the first woman to be killed in a bobsleigh accident in competition when she died of head injuries sustained in a crash in Bad Gastein, Austria, in 2000. In 2002, Smith and Heynen were in a four-woman bobsleigh with Rachel Barlow and Kieren Perkins as teammates. In the finals of the race, the women's bobsleigh crashed at approximately 40 meters from the finish line. Perkins and Barlow were trapped underneath the chassis. Perkins survived the crash, but Barlow was declared dead on arrival at hospital. She is a qualified coach at the International Society for Competition Analysis. It's hard enough to watch video of your son being crucified in the front-page headlines of Britain's newspapers every day. But Bali's people are the ones who are burning the holy books, throwing rocks at the Islam faith and killing the priests. Why is it we are still blaming Indonesia? In the years to come, my father will have to hear again about the "Indonesian curse". I'm not sure if he will ever get over it. * The author's son, Jason Coleman, was caught up in the Bali disaster and died on a rescue ship. * This
