review "The story is very strong, Vigil: The Longest Night is a "horror adventure game where you.. Vigil: The Longest Night PC.Changing the YouTube video quality levels uses a pretty transparent method—adjusting the flash intensity and for example alpha transparency of the background—to hide and reveal different parts of your video at different qualities. It's a non-destructive method and it's used pretty often, so we didn't want to mess with it. However, when the detail is stripped away, the video quality drops to H.264, and the player suddenly doesn't playback in many browsers. For a long time, these videos have played without errors in YouTube's HTML5 Player, and they're stuck at 1080p because our videos aren't natively 1080p. But, with the introduction of Chrome 58 we've heard that some sites are getting h.264 videos back to their previous state. But when we checked in Chrome 57, it was still stripping the quality, so we checked the latest, Chrome 58. But, it's still stripping the quality! We've fired off a support ticket to Google to see if this is a one-time thing, but it looks like a bug to us. So, if you know a fix, we'd love to know about it! Update: Thanks to jdblair on Google's Chromium issue tracker, it's a known bug and it looks like we're going to have to wait a while for this to get fixed. As for the workaround, the best we've been able to do so far
