It is one of the torrent files created by seismic under the domain torrent.george, and has been seen most commonly in the Extension.torrent,.RAR.Q: Javascript math function (math.random()) issue I'm having an issue with a script I wrote, which is meant to calculate a random number in the range 0 to 1. One of the issues I'm encountering is that I'm getting a value close to the max/min value instead of the proper value. Why is that and how can it be resolved? Additionally, is there a way to calculate a math.random() that is constant in time, no matter how many times the script is run? I used to use php long time ago, and that's how I've been taught to do it. Thank you A: There are a variety of ways to do this. Here's one way: $b? $a : $b); } function max($a, $b) { return ($a Some may prefer to use the following to avoid the time() and rand() functions:
