Keymacro 1.2.0 Keymacro is a hotkey utility for Mac OS X that enables you to bind a key combination to launch an application. Keymacro is based on the super-simple and very convenient "Keyremap4Macbook" project available for OS X for its community of users, but offers a lot of features and customization options that weren't available in Keyremap4Macbook. After installation, you can use the application without adding any hotkeys and hotkey assignments. No customizations are necessary to use Keymacro. Keymacro offers a dialog-based interface that lets you manage the hotkey assignments that you created. You can set up the hotkey assignments for any application, even when it is not installed yet, by defining an arbitrary "virtual key" combination in its "Keymacro Settings" window. The hotkeys you define in this window will be used to launch the application when you press the combination of keys you assigned to them. With Keymacro, you can use a single hotkey to launch several applications or perform several actions in a single application. Keymacro can also launch applications that are not listed in the application hotkey list. Keymacro is also a powerful trigger that can be configured to launch any application or to perform any action in any application. With Keymacro, you can create "hotkey templates". With Keymacro, you can also add keyboard modifiers to the hotkey combinations, and you can define a hotkey in Keymacro's settings that will perform the selected function. Keymacro will allow you to customize the hotkeys you assign to any application using a very user-friendly interface.
