Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.3.1) [Mac/Win]

Live Free or Die About HISTORY Back in 2015, Pete met up with his best friend Dino at their mutual friend Jack's place. The two of them had a pretty casual conversation about the bergamot football (Bergamot being the common name for a band of camels in the black rock desert). And while talking about Dina, Pete said: Dina's like a brick that everyone's trapped in, all the other bricks go up and everyone can't see the big picture. Dino and Pete got along famously, and they quickly became great friends. They decided to make music together, Dina was a great guitarist who loved just sitting on a 3-chord blues progression, then Pete had loads of melody ideas for a song. They quickly started recording for this project, a project which they called Live Free or Die. They recorded in the smallest, loveliest barn on their friend Jack's land, the barn where the lost original tapes of All The Girls Love Alice was recorded. So next, Pete went on a sonic adventure and recorded vocals at Mick's home studio, and between the two, he found his confidence. Needless to say, he ended up producing the whole record in his house, but he didn't have the means to pay for the studio he was in at the time, so he had no choice but to do what he could. That was the last straw. The Live Free or Die record was born. It was just an instrumental project, but it was heavy. So heavy that it could have been a bluegrass record. But the guitars were driven with heavy rock, and Pete wanted to give it a twist, so he recorded the first Dina vocal with a crunchy filter and synth. The sound design on the album was inspired by Star Wars and Deus Ex. One of the biggest inspirations for the record was the work of American rock musician, Jeff Buckley. Looking back at the recording process it seems like there's a lot of timelessness to the album, in fact, Pete described it as timeless. Finally, the album was put on Spotify, and as you can see from the lack of a single bad review, people really liked it. In the year of 2016, Pete and Dino started the bootcamp for the new album. And it was pretty clear. Pete and Dino's affinity for each other is incapable of being broken, and that was the starting point. Once the two of them graduated from the bootcamp, they went to Bon
