Happy is the man who finds wisdom, whom his mother teaches.”) To live is to know that those we encounter have their own complexities and their own little quirks and, while we may be able to recognize that in ourselves at a glance, in most everyone else we see there is an ocean of depth. We are each unique, and we all have each other’s’ backs. But with all the complexities and idiosyncrasies and nuances and scars, we are also all human beings and we are all worthy of the love, understanding, and acceptance that is ours. We are all worth our salt. With this in mind, the next time someone starts to blame you, or to throw you under the bus, or to tell you “that’s just how’s it is,” try to remember that underneath, they are probably just trying to be a good friend. If they are, then you are blessed. It is good to remember what true friendship means. It means we do not listen at the invitation, “Who dares?”Petition to Catholic Bishops: Remove the Sexual Abuse Target from the Process A call to the Catholic leaders to remove the sexual abuse target from the investigation into all claims of sexual abuse of minors by Catholics and request priests and members of the clergy report all allegations of abuse to law enforcement, with only the cardinal and bishop allowed to dismiss any allegation of sexual abuse of a minor.
