The story of Grand Theft Auto IV was a long one. Developers Rockstar wanted to take advantage of Grand Theft Auto IV's popularity, and give the player a lot of freedom. This wouldn't be just a re-release of the older games, no! they wanted to give the players the feeling of being an actual part of Los Santos. The effects of Grand Theft Auto IV are all over the place. Trees are no longer limited to just having three positions, now they do a variety of actions. The more the players wander around, the more that they start to see that the city is a living, breathing entity. That being said, there are over 300 different things for you to do in the game. Grand Theft Auto IV is all about making the player feel a part of the game. This entry in the Grand Theft Auto series takes place in a city known as San Andreas. Its main feature is that it is huge, and it takes hours and hours to walk around. San Andreas is only two square kilometers, but it can take days to explore it. Since San Andreas is huge, you will have a much better gameplay experience than in earlier games. The amount of things to do in San Andreas is simply remarkable. However, Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas is not just a city to explore, you will be faced with many missions that you can complete in the game. Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas is all about action. However, it does not matter whether you like shooting or not. Basically, Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas will offer you a lot of awesome shooting games. As in earlier games, Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas has an innovative shooting feature known as proximity grenades. You can now plant them on each other, and your enemies will explode in their face. You can also use these grenades to blow up obstacles that block your path. There are even some cars that you can drive and blow up with proximity grenades.
