the increase in oxygen to the baby could be even better if the infant was being exposed to a heated environment. mothers who have access to a radiant heat lamp will have better skin-to-skin contact with their babies. the skin-to-skin contact is absolutely critical to baby care. it keeps the babies temperature more stable which makes for a more comfortable experience for both you and your infant. kangaroo care has been a controversial topic for years and has been in the spotlight in recent times with the holding of premature babies. the debate revolves around the fact that some mothers who use this method have reported a steep increase in breast milk production. breast milk washes over the baby and is said to make the baby happier and healthier. other mothers feel as if the increased breast milk production is due to the mothers emotional attachment to the baby. however, kangaroo care has been noted to decrease infection rates in premature babies. this type of attachment is even being recommended to all babies except for premature babies because it could interfere with their development. what is generally recommended is to keep a healthy diet and schedule along with exercise to promote the health of your baby. kangaroo care has many benefits and can be a very rewarding and fun way to spend time with your new baby. simply wrap your baby up in a blanket, let him or her sleep for a bit then place your baby down on the body. remember to make sure that theyre covered completely and that theyre dry. kangaroo care can also be done at home as well as in the hospital. it can be done up to several hours in one session. each session may be done up to 5 times a day. 5ec8ef588b
