The csv is very large and does not fit in memory (so I'm reading a small section at a time). I thought the csv module worked like this: with open(filename, 'rb') as csvfile: for line in csvfile: do_stuff(line) but this is extremely slow (ie. running it for about 30 seconds takes 30 seconds, compared to doing it in R on a 15x faster machine takes 1 second). The csv is very large, so I don't want to do it line by line, I want to read it all at once. Is there a way to do this, or is this just not the way to read a csv file? A: If you use csv.reader, this should be much faster: import csv with open(filename, 'rb') as csvfile: csv_reader = csv.reader(csvfile, delimiter='\t') for row in csv_reader: do_stuff(row) A: You could use CSV to parse a single column line-by-line from the csv file. >>> import csv >>> with open('data.csv') as f: ... csv_reader = csv.reader(f) ... for row in csv_reader: ... print row ... ['a', 'b', 'c', 'd'] ['e', 'f', 'g', 'h'] A
